South-South cooperation on development aims to observe the principle of non-interference in internal affairs, equality among developing partners and respect for their independence, national sovereignty, cultural diversity and identity and local content. It plays an important role in international development cooperation and is a valuable complement, to North-South cooperation.

- no governance conditionalites
- noninterference principle
- experience sharing
- bilateral cooperation and negotiation
- mutual benefits

Since the 1950s, China has started to receive African students to study in China.

During the last five decades, China has provided government scholarships to 50 African counties and nearly 30,000 African students have got their further study in China.

At present, the Chinese government offers about 5,000 scholarships to African students each year.
Categories of Chinese Government Scholarship for African Students in 2010

In 2010, 5710 African students were awarded Chinese Government Scholarships, 2334 of whom studied for master’s degree and 850 of whom studied for doctoral degree.

6. Problems and Challenges

- How China enhances its national image through educational cooperation and cultural exchange.

- How Chinese higher education reforms and enhances its capacity to serve the practice of Sino-African education cooperation.

- How China cooperates and coordinates with other donors in the education sector and builds partner network.

- How China coordinates the different ministries and agencies which involve in China-Africa cooperation.

- How China develops its evaluation mechanism to facilitate the sustainability of China-Africa education cooperation.
