Language: English

Speaker: Ms. Ryoko HONDA

Clinical psychologist, Institute for Family Functioning

Board member, Japan Association for Play Therapy

Former UNICEF program officer, monitoring and evaluation, UNICEF Ghana

(MPS International Agriculture and Rural Development, Cornell University

MA Clinical Psychology, California School of Professional Psychology, Alliant International University)

After working as an NGO community development worker for two years in rural Philippines, and as monitoring and evaluation officer for four years in UNICEF Ghana, the speaker returned to the academia to study clinical psychology. Presently, as board member of the Japan Association for Play Therapy, the speaker is working together with the Japan National Committee for UNICEF, in providing psychosocial care to children, with a special focus on infants, toddlers and pre-school children, in the Iwate and Miyagi prefectures, as well as evacuation sites for people from Fukushima. Psychosocial programming in post-disaster situations requires constant assessment, flexibility and professional psychological knowledge and skills. Considerations in psychosocial interventions in post-disaster situations will be discussed.
