About the Forum

International Education Development Forum (originally called as Educational Development Annual Joint Retreat) is a network of graduate students who are interested in issues related to education and development and has provided valuable opportunities to share knowledge and experiences. It started in 2004 with three Japanese graduate school, namely: Graduate School of International Development (GSID) Nagoya University; Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies (GSAPS) Waseda University; and Graduate School of International Cooperation Studies (GSICS) Kobe University.

In recent years, the network expanded its scale by involving Hiroshima University and Seoul National University. This year, it also invites participants from China, Hong Kong, and Taiwan. It has become a regional graduate school student network which aims to keep contributing to the field of international education development and to establish a sustainable academic network among young scholars in Asia.

In this forum, participants are welcome to share their own researches and exchange opinions with other participants and professors in diverse academic disciplines. This year, the forum will be held, as a part of the Conference on Asian Education and Development hosted by Graduate School of International Development Nagoya University, on October 26-27, 2012. Participants from graduate schools in Asia are warmly welcome.
